Residential Facilities, Assisted Living, and Nursing Homes

Assisted living is for people who need help with daily care, but not as much help as a nursing home provides. Assisted living facilities range in size from as few as 25 residents to 120 or more. Typically, a few "levels of care" are offered, with residents paying more for higher levels of care.

Difference Between Nursing Home and Rehab Facilities?

Nursing homes today seek to provide a permanent home for elderly people who need daily care with routine tasks or who may require supervision and monitoring of their movements. Operators of nursing homes seek to create a pleasant environment with as many amenities as possible.

From hospital to nursing home eventually - McGill Reporter

In the past, if elderly hospital patients were deemed in need of long-term care, they were moved to the hospital's nursing home care evaluation wing, where they lived until there was an availability in the long-term facility of their choice. Under Program 68, which was piloted in two Montreal hospitals and is now being rolled out in the greater Montreal area, patients are subjected to many Nursing Facilities | Medicaid.gov
