Teaching and learning English in a multilingual classroom classrooms has been researched a lot but mainly in homogeneous L1 groups/communities and L3 learning is a neglected area of research (Jorda, 2005:1). Therefore this study will focus on code-switching in an L2 EFL/ESL teaching/learning situation in a heterogeneous classroom with a variety of different L1/mother tongues.

culture. The acquisition of a second language, except for specialized, instrumental acquisition [], is also the acquisition of a second culture (p. 189-190). Based on these findings, it is clear that language and culture learning are inextricably linked, but what role does culture play in language teaching and how is it being taught?
